Charges

The amounts in the table are shown in SEK and are based on a purchase or sale of SEK 100,000 respectively. Any change in value is not included in the table. The prices in the table are those set out in the standard price list. The product costs are based on information from the producer. The correctness cannot be guaranteed and the information may be incomplete.

Example

Shown here is a concrete example of how costs and charges can affect the value of an investment over time.

To show more clearly how the charges affect the value of the investment, the example assumes that there is no change in the value of the actual investment during the period, since such changes in value vary between different periods and different products. In the example, the charges are accumulated over the years. The amounts are shown in SEK.

Time period	Annual return before charges	Gross return	Charges	Return after charges
1 year	0.00%	0	0	0

The Bank may receive minor benefits from third parties in the form of general information regarding financial instruments or services, material paid for by issuing institutions, or participation in conferences, seminars or similar events, as well as hospitality within appropriate boundaries. Such benefits are considered reasonable and in proportion, and do not affect the Bank's decision-making in any way that is detrimental to its customers' interests.
